Glover named Young Breeder of the Year

Scott Glover, right, is the Georgia Holstein Association's Young Breeder of the Year. Presenting the award is his uncle, Steve Crumley.

Scott Glover, Owner of Glo-Crest Dairy in Cleveland, was named Young Breeder of the Year by the Georgia Holstein Association at their annual meeting in Macon on March 13.

Glover also received an award for milk production and one for fat content at the annual meeting.

Glover breeds registered cows under the "Que Sera Sera" prefix at Glo-Crest Dairy.

He and his wife Jennifer live in Clermont with their daughter, Eliza Jane.

Glover was voted Southeast Milk's Outstanding Young Dairyman for 2009 and serves on the Georgia Milk Producers Board, has received SMI's Quality Milk Award for the past six years and the Cream of the Crop Award for the past seven years.
